Hurricane Sandy slams city, wreaks havoc along coast

The massive storm brings intense wind gusts, roiling seas to Massachusetts Thousands experience power outages, destruction from downed trees MBTA is forced to terminate service before evening rush hour {pages 02, 04}

Commuters rely on T during testy tempest

- While NYC, Philly shut down, T was only major transit system running
- Most commuters said early shut down was only minor inconvenience

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Many who were able to catch the last trains and buses before the T shut down yesterday returned to homes without electricity.

Hurricane Sandy sauntered out of the region overnight, but not before she left behind some less than ideal mementos of her brief twist with the Boston area.

Thousands of people were left without power, broken tree limbs were scattered about various streets and the MBTA was shuttered well before the evening rush.

As of 2:30 p.m., as the storm's full force was starting to move into the area, there were more than 52,000 homes and businesses without power, according to NSTAR. Customers without power numbered more than 5,200 in Boston, 1,274 in Cambridge and 1,455 in Somerville.

In addition to Sandy shutting off the power, she also shut down the MBTA.

When the T would resume service had yet to be determined as of press time.

T officials announced at about 10:15 a.m. that service was being suspended at 2 p.m. sending commuters rushing to get home.

At about noon, South Station looked more like it typically does at 5 p.m. While inside the station scores of commuters stared up at the electronic departure board waiting for their trains, travelers rushing to get inside had their hats blown off their head and even one passenger was blown over and slipped on the platform.

The last time the T suspended service was last August for Hurricane Irene.

"We felt it was necessary to make sure we maintained service for as long was we could to accommodate our customers," MBTA Acting General Manager Jonathan Davis told Metro yesterday. "We understand that our services are vital to get people to their jobs and things they need, like medical appointments, so we felt it necessary to stay open for as long as possible."

As he waited for his Greenbush Line train out of South Station yesterday afternoon, Brian Mahoney said his ride in was "on time and empty." He was leaving his job at a nearby hospital early to return home to Scituate and gave himself an hour to deal with what he thought would be a slow trip to the transit hub.

But to Mahoney's surprise, the ride went smoothly. he said.

Down and out

While the T was up and running yesterday, various major public transit systems quit before the storm even hit.

- Service on New York's subway and bus system, as well as the Long Island Rail Road and Metro-North Railroad were suspended as of 7 p.m. Sunday and through yesterday.
- The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority, which serves Philadelphia, suspended all services at the end of Sunday's schedule and through yesterday.
- New Jersey TRANSIT implemented a gradual system-wide shutdown Sunday that lasted through yesterday.
- The agencies said yesterday afternoon that the duration of the service suspensions were unknown.

More cancellations

Agencies and businesses were already canceling services yesterday for today. As of press time the following services were canceled for Tuesday:

- Amtrak canceled all services in the Northeaster Corridor through today.
- Financial markets will be closed again today as Wall Street is dealing with the impacts of Hurricane Sandy in New York. Monday was the first unscheduled market closing since 9/11.

New poll shows close Senate race

MASSACHUSETTS. A new poll shows that Sen. Scott Brown and Democrat Elizabeth Warren are within 2 points with a week to go before Election Day. The Boston Globe poll, which was released yesterday, showed Brown with 45 percent and Warren with 43 percent.

The poll of nearly 600 likely voters has a margin of error of 4.1 percent. It was conducted by the University of New Hampshire Survey Center. METRO

BU suspends fraternity

BOSTON. Officials at Boston University have suspended a fraternity over allegations of hazing.

The BU chapter of the Sigma Chi fraternity was placed on interim suspension Friday, according to BU Today.

Officials are investigating and said the hazing may have involved "extended isolation" and forced alcohol consumption, according to BU Today.

Members of the fraternity's international organization are cooperating.

It is the third incident involving allegations of hazing at greek organizations connected with BU in the last eight months. METRO

Sandy delays Mattapan massacre trial

BOSTON. The retrial of Dwayne Moore, the man accused of gunning down four people including a 2-year-old and his mother, was delayed because of Hurricane Sandy.

Moore's trial was scheduled to start yesterday, but because of severe weather it is expected to get underway tomorrow.

Moore, who is also accused of shooting a fifth man who survived the 2010 robbery, is about to be tried for the second time. A jury could not decide his first trial.

Because of the media coverage of the shooting and trial a judge ordered that jurors from Worcester County would be chosen and then bussed to Suffolk Superior Court in Boston. METRO

Strike two for Bulger on judge recusal

Bulger judge says — again — that he will stay on bench Ruling says Whitey's lawyer gave no new info

Saying that he isn't swayed by warnings that he will be called as a witness, the judge in the trial of James "Whitey" Bulger rejected the alleged fugitive mob boss's request to recuse himself from the bench.

In a ruling issued Sunday, Judge Richard Stearns denied a motion filed last week by Bulger's attorney. It was the second time the attorney, J.W. Carney Jr., sought to have Stearns remove himself from the trial.

"Because at no time during my service as an [assistant U.S. attorney] did I participate in or have any knowledge of any case or investigation in which defendant was a subject matter or target, I have nothing of a relevant or material nature to offer with regard to this case or any claim of immunity," Stearns wrote in his decision.

Carney has argued in motions that Stearns will be called as a witness in Bulger's attempt to prove that he was given immunity by Jeremiah O'Sullivan, a former U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts. Before he was a judge, Stearns served as an assistant U.S. attorney.

MICHAEL NAUGHTON
michael.naughton@metro.us

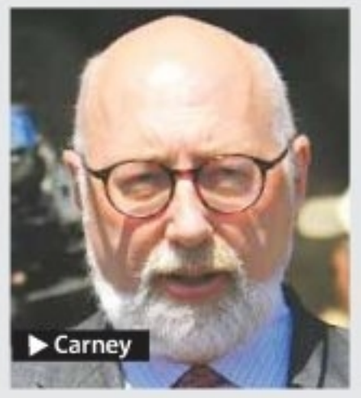
Hearing this week

Bulger's lawyer is expected in court this week to argue once again for a trial delay.

A hearing on the matter is scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

On Friday, Carney filed a second motion to have the start date of the trial pushed back.

▶ Bulger



▶ Carney

Bulger's trial is slated to begin in March, but Carney has argued that the volumes of evidence will be difficult to get through before that time as obstacles still remain preventing them from being able to adequately prepare.

Carney partially won a motion last year when a judge pushed back the trial a few months rather than a year like Carney was looking for.

Obama returns to White House to monitor Sandy

President Barack Obama canceled campaign events in Florida and Wisconsin to return to Washington yesterday and monitor the impact and response to Hurricane Sandy, the White House said.

Obama ended plans to speak at a Florida university in Orlando yesterday and flew back to Washington, a White House spokesman said. Another event scheduled for today in Green Bay, Wisconsin, was also canceled.

"The president will return to the White House to monitor the preparations for and early response to Hurricane Sandy," White House spokesman Jay Carney said in a statement. Obama will remain in Washington today to follow the storm's impact.

Obama arrived in Florida on Sunday night, coming a day early to try to beat the storm.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Obama yesterday

He was to have held a joint campaign event with former President Bill Clinton, who will still attend the rally.

The president delivered pizzas to a local campaign office in Florida on Sunday night and told volunteers that the burden would increase for them because he would have to curtail his campaign activities in the coming days.

Florida and Wisconsin are both critical election states. Obama has also canceled events in swing states Virginia and Colorado due to the storm.

Despite the drawback of canceling events roughly a week before Election Day, the storm gives Obama an opportunity to appear presidential during a natural disaster.

Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney has also canceled campaign events as a result of the storm. REUTERS

News in brief

Most East Coast refiners shutting as Sandy nears

More than two-thirds of the U.S. East Coast's refining capacity shut yesterday ahead of Hurricane Sandy, sending gasoline futures up as much as 4 percent as operators braced for potentially damaging power outages and flooding.

With Sandy gaining strength, Philadelphia Energy Solutions began the precautionary closure of key units at its Philadelphia refinery, the biggest in the region, a source familiar with operations said.

Oil traders were factoring in a potential squeeze on fuel supplies, sending gasoline prices up almost 12 cents a gallon in early trade before pulling back. Inventories were already at relatively low levels across the region.

While prices rose in response to the refinery closures, some analysts said the storm would also cut heavily into oil demand in the densely populated region, with most people avoiding driving and airlines grounded during the storm. REUTERS

Fourteen rescued from HMS Bounty; two still missing

The U.S. Coast Guard yesterday rescued 14 of the 16 crew who abandoned the replica tall ship HMS Bounty while in the path of Hurricane Sandy off North Carolina, using helicopters to lift them from life rafts, the Coast Guard said.

The tall ship was built for the 1962 movie "Mutiny on the Bounty" and lost power while at sea on Sunday night. The original Bounty, a British transport vessel, gained infamy for a mutiny in Tahiti in 1789.

The Coast Guard continued to search for the two missing crew members. REUTERS

Windy city still loves its

‘He made us realize that we could run for office and win, too,’ says local politician Four years after his historic victory, Barack Obama still enjoys strong support in his home city of Chicago But he has changed politics here, too: his presidential win encouraged outsiders to challenge the Democratic Party’s firm grip on power here

Patricia Watkins, a former drug addict and steel worker who went on to earn a PhD, is running for the Illinois State Senate, and she considers herself a product of Barack Obama’s 2008 presidential victory. “It completely changed Chicago politics,” she explains to Metro in her Chicago home. “Before Obama, the candidate that the party machine here selected won every single time. And once they were elected, they were in for life. Obama was very exciting for us, because Hillary Clinton was the party machine’s choice here in Chicago. Nobody expected a Barack Hussein Obama, from the South Side, to win.”

The Obama supporters

- “Before Obama’s speech at the 2004 Democratic convention, we didn’t know anything about him,” reflects Peggy Forbes, an English teacher in the Chicago suburb of Evanston. “But ever since that speech, I’ve been a very strong Obama supporter.” She and her husband, Jim, will vote for Obama again despite his failure to fix the economy, Obama’s Achilles heel in this election. “When he took office, he was handed an economic mess,” she explains. “To expect him to fix it was naïve. And our son has served in Iraq twice, so we very much support Obama’s decision to get the troops out.”
- The Forbes had hoped that Obama would get gun control legislation passed, and they note that Obama was inexperienced when he took office. “But he did bring experienced people with him,” notes Jim. And they have no doubts about casting their votes for Obama again. “We’re not hurting financially,” explains Peggy. “And our son is home from the war. Things are not perfect in this country, but I don’t blame Obama for that.” They have already voted, but will try to get others to vote on election day. “Even though Illinois will go to Obama, we mustn’t be complacent,” Peggy says.

▶ Peggy and Jim Forbes

Chicago’s South Side is its poor part, with 80-90% of its residents African-American. Unemployment and violence are rampant. This is where the Obama family still has their home, albeit in a wealthy enclave. But neither in the South Side, nor anywhere else in Chicago, does one see the ubiquitous yard signs of every American election. “It would be a waste of money,” says one Chicago resident. “Everybody knows that Obama will win.”

Angel Garcia knows that, too. As president of the Chicago Young Republicans, he spends every free moment canvassing and knocking on doors on behalf of Republican candidates. “Sure it’s difficult, but we understand that we don’t have to win Chicago, which is almost impossible,” he explains. “We can make a dent. And Obama took the best Chicago Democrats with him to Washington. That’s an opportunity for us.” Obama has a 16 percentage-point lead over Mitt Romney in Illinois, and an even wider margin in Chicago. 1988 was the last time a Republican presidential candidate won Illinois.

“Chicago is a very working-class Democratic city,” says Anne Nicklin, a young Chicago architect. “People are very supportive of Obama, but he doesn’t factor into local politics. The only thing is when he comes

'I oppose Obama's policies'

Elizabeth Brown, a lawyer in Chicago, likes Barack Obama. Her brother even interned with Obama at a law firm. But she didn't vote for Obama in 2008, and won't this time either. "He's very smart," she says. "I think he has good family values. But I don't agree with his policies. I believe in smaller government, and I also think he's been very ineffective. He got healthcare reform passed, but not much else." She also has doubts about Obama because of his background in Illinois politics. "There's so much corruption here," she explains. "He wasn't involved in it, but of course he had to touch on the edges of it."

▶ Elizabeth Brown and Gene Thiele

Brown isn't thrilled with Mitt Romney, either, but will vote for him anyway. "I believe Obama is honest and upright, and if it were a personality contest, I'd vote for him. But of course the election is about policies." For this part, Brown's husband Gene Thiele wants to hear nothing about the election: "Congress will just block whatever the President does anyway."

here, which is rarely, you notice it because streets get closed and there's a huge traffic jam." Obama's former chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel, is now Chicago's mayor.

Chicago and Illinois, the state where it's located, have long been infamous for their political corruption. Two former governors are currently serving jail time. "They've all been there for a very long time, and they forget who they work for," reflects Watkins. "But after Obama's win, people outside the party machine started to campaign and run for office. Obama made it seem like, 'If he can win the presidency, we should be able to win a county or state senate seat'. There has been a complete shake-up of the system."

Watkins is a case in point: running as an outsider, she has already won the Democratic primary in her district, which includes some of Chicago's poorest neighborhoods. She's virtually guaranteed victory on election day, Tueday November 6, just a week away.

And Angel Garcia?

He and other young Chicago Republicans are spending a lot of time volunteering for Mitt Romney in Ohio and Wisconsin, two nearby swing states: "I'm optimistic because we're encountering a lot of undecided voters there," he reports.

"That's very good. Undecided voters usually end up voting for the challenger."

ROLLINS WANTS YOU

... To act like a responsible American and vote! He also wants you to come to his show, obviously

HEIDI MAY

▶ Rollins, like Uncle Sam, may seem beaten down, but he still has some fight left in him. And at press time, Rollins' Capitalism Tour was still on for tonight. Call Berklee for the latest updates.

Henry Rollins is an opinionated man. He's a man who can talk up a storm. Once upon a time, fronting Black Flag and then the Rollins Band, he not so much sang up a storm as he yelled one into being. This fall, the L.A.-based, D.C.-native is taking a break from his year-long Long March tour — not for quiet time, but for his Capitalism Tour, which hits the nation's state capitals as a run-up to the election. Rollins knows where his vote's going, but he tells Metro the tour is bipartisan.

"I don't tell people who to vote for. My audience is full of adults, they know who they want to vote for," says Rollins. "I do tell people about the importance of voting, though. It's alarming to me that a large portion of people in this country who can vote don't vote. That they don't take part in the democracy of this country enrages me. I don't think any president determines the future of the country beyond a certain extent, but this institution is set up for everyone to weigh in. If you don't, you don't get the real thing. You get a blunted democracy."

Rollins thinks that the saying "you get the Government you deserve" sums up the process.

"It's one of the truest things I've ever heard. You got George W. Bush. Well, you deserved George W. Bush. You didn't stand up against it. Whether you want to be part of the process or not, you are. Either you're part of the process or you're processed. You are either doing, or getting done."

ROLLINS

To not repeat the past

It might be topically serious, but Rollins' stand-up show is very entertaining. "I hope that's what comes across," he says, "but it can't be funny all the time."

After this tour will Rollins return to music?

"No, I hit it hard and I've got nothing left to give to it," he says. "Rather than repeat the past, I'd rather walk away."

Tough TG-810

Drop it, dunk it, splash it, freeze it!

If you're looking for a camera that can keep up with all of life's adventures, you've found it. The TG-810 lets you snap stunning photos -- and record HD movies -- wherever you are. It can handle drops up to 6.6 feet, operate in freezing snowstorms, and swim with the fishes -- dangerous conditions for most other digital cameras.

Living in a romantic comedy

‘The Mindy Project’ creator and star Mindy Kaling has been preparing for this love-driven sitcom her whole life

Mindy Kaling proved herself a likable dreamer with her best-selling collection of memoir-like humor essays, “Is Everyone Hanging Out Without Me? (And Other Concerns),” along with her role as the ditzy romantic Kelly on “The Office.” She brings her unapologetic take on the modern young woman to Fox as creator and star of “The Mindy Project,” following a dedicated OB-GYN (Kaling) who is way more successful in the operating room than the bedroom. We sat down with Kaling and focused on the positives — like getting her own show.

Why the “great at her job, terrible at love” device isn’t cliché ...

Tune-in

“The Mindy Project” Halloween episode airs tonight at 9:30 on Fox.

“The thing that I learned from ‘The Office’ is [storytelling is about] execution. I want to see two people fall in love; I want to see two people learn how to be better people. It’s old-fashioned, but I feel like [those are] the kind of stories that people want to see, and they want it so badly, they’ll even see it when it’s terrible,” Kaling says.

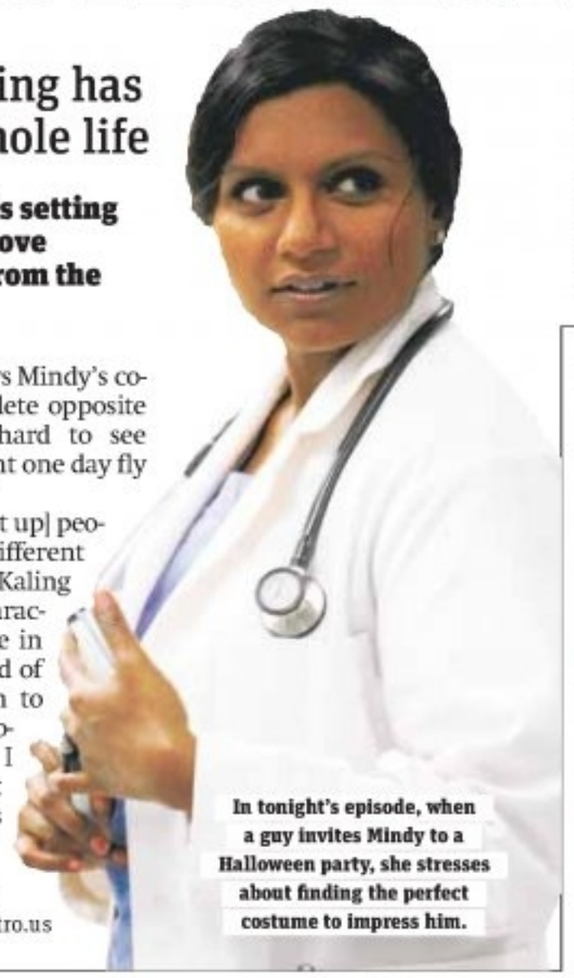
“How to balance work and personal life, that’s the single biggest issue that my friends talk about,” she adds. “Somebody might think it’s cliché; then my life is a cliché.”

... and neither is setting up a potential love interest right from the start.

Chris Messina plays Mindy’s coworker and complete opposite — but it’s not hard to see where sparks might one day fly between the two.

“I wanted to [set up] people who are different from each other,” Kaling says. “[Chris’ character] doesn’t believe in marriage; he’s kind of cynical — it’s fun to do that kind of storytelling. Plus, I love looking at him. Maybe that’s sexist.”

AMBER RAY
amber.ray@metro.us



In tonight’s episode, when a guy invites Mindy to a Halloween party, she stresses about finding the perfect costume to impress him.

True story

“You know that saying: ‘Write what you know,’” Kaling says. “Every level of that is [exemplified] in the pilot: What is it like to love romance? What’s it like to be a professional after being a nerd, growing up? I’ve been working on [this sitcom] since I was a kid because it’s my life in so many ways.”

Nick Cannon: My fight with kidney disease

▶ "Once every five minutes someone's kidneys fail," says Nick Cannon, who led this year's Kidney Walk on Oct. 14 at the South Street Seaport in New York City.

DAVID SMITH FOR THE NATIONAL KIDNEY FOUNDATION

Who was Nick Cannon's biggest supporter when he buckled up against the kidney disease he was diagnosed with earlier this year? That would be "Dr. Carey," what he affectionately calls his wife Mariah. Cannon opened up about his battle with the disease before he hosted this year's National Kidney Foundation's Kidney Walk, which took place earlier this month.

Walk us through what this past year has been like for you. How did you know that something was wrong with your body?

I didn't know. I just thought I was more tired than normal and I just thought I could fight through it because usually that's how I deal. I had pain in my right side and my lower back a lot. I got to a point where I couldn't even walk, it made it really difficult for me to breathe, so at that point I was like, "This is probably more serious than I thought." My wife decided that I should see a doctor and then from there they thought it was a few different things. ... They did tests and I had minor kidney failure. From there it was just like, "All right, now how do we fix this?"

When your doctor gave you the diagnosis, how did you feel? Surprised? Scared? Hopeful?

I was definitely surprised. It didn't seem like it was something that I would ever have to deal with. And then it was a difficult thing to understand, so I just wanted to learn more — what was going on with my body and how I could fix it and how I could reverse everything that was going on. I wanted the doctors to tell me everything.

Have you had to change your lifestyle since the diagnosis?

Mostly everything that has changed has just been diet and making sure that I get a lot of rest. I'm someone who's always on the go and never really gets a lot of rest. My doctors have made sure that that's become something that was a priority.

That must be difficult since you have twins.

Yeah, absolutely, because they're always awake.

Is it possible that your kids could inherit your illness?

We already checked on that. That's not even an issue.

What kind of support has your wife given you throughout this?

The best support. I call her Dr. Carey. She's been there for me more than anyone, making sure I'm taken care of.

Quoted

"I'm someone who's always on the go and never really gets a lot of rest. My doctors have made sure that that's become something that was a priority."

"I felt spirits moving around me, even touching me during the night. I would often hear footsteps, opening and closing doors… Even my children were affected, nightmares, insomnia, fear… I was invited to the Help Center and I learned how to drive out that negativity. The hell that we all once lived in is gone and our home has become peaceful and happy. We all sleep easily and those paranormal activities have stopped." - Eileen

Who's persecuting whom?

RE: "WANT TO KEEP YOUR FAITH? BETTER PUT IT IN ROMNEY" (METRO, OCT. 26-28) The ignorance of the populace is amazing! Letter writer Joann Flanagan says, "Vote for Obama if you're for religious persecution." There has been no facts stating that Obama will prosecute anyone practising religion or any part of the church at all. Where have you been these past four years when Obama did any of that, and what makes you think he would do it now. If you're referring to the fact that he doesn't cross church and state then you're just stating a plus of the president.
DYLAN SCARZAFAVA, VIA E-MAIL

Ms. Flanagan accuses the president of religious persecution, but I like to point that our president does not force you to follow his religion and punish you if you do not. Maybe if politicians would take more time following their own religion instead of forcing people to live by their religion (no abortion, no gay marriage, no contraceptives, abstinence only) this country would be a lot better off.
DAN JOHNSON, VIA E-MAIL

Ms. Flanagan claims that Obama wants to "start a religious persecution." This is a blatantly false and uninformed statement. The only people who want religious persecution are religious people. Since she claims persecution, she's probably for prayer in school. I doubt she would be happy with Jewish, Islamic, Buddist, or pagan prayer in school. Our Constitution — which is also hers — prohibits putting one religion over another. We can't have school or teacher-led prayer in public schools because it would be impossible to satisfy every religion.
DAVID GRISWOLD, VIA E-MAIL

Letter writer Joann Flanagan needs to read up on religious persecution and its role in the founding of the colonies that became our nation. The religious persecution came in the form of kings and parliament forcing people to live under their version of Christianity and oppressing you if you did not conform. Our founding fathers recognized this which is why we do not have a national religion, a fact the right forgets when they rule based on their personal religious agendas.
DANIEL JELKE, VIA E-MAIL

I think Joann Flanagan and I are living in two different dimensions of the United States. How is Obama in favor of religious persecution? The only persecutions in this race are the personal freedoms being denied by the Romney crew. Ask yourself this; Are you in favor of sexism and homophobia leading this country? Then vote for Romney. Are you in favor of social equality and equal rights for everyone, then vote for Obama. EMMA LENA, VIA E-MAIL

Like Joann Flanagan, I hope people show up to vote — not just for our president, but as participants in the whole political process. Unlike Joann, my wife and I have directly experienced religious persecution at the hands of Mormons and other extremist Christians. I will be voting for Obama, who does not confuse religious freedom with providing religions a pass to commit violence toward others. CHARLES BOSSE, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. You're not apt to be wishy-washy when it comes to making a critical decision. By letting others know where you stand, you'll have a big advantage.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Spend your precious hours working on worthwhile endeavors. If you fail to use your talents and time productively, chances are you'll suffer feelings of guilt.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. You're a born organizer, so when you step in to restore order in a chaotic condition created by others, even you'll be amazed at your performance.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Although you might be somewhat reluctant to commit yourself, if you fail to use your time wisely, chances are you'll regret it. Focus your efforts on personal or spiritual advancement.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Because you're so well equipped to handle projects of a mental nature, you should be able to see things from a practical yet innovative point of view.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Working to your advantage is your gift for amassing financial or material gain. If you're forced to work with intangibles, however, you won't do as well.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. There are times when it's prudent to focus on your personal interests at the exclusion of everything else, and it may be one of those days. Help yourself first so you can then assist others.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Certain answers that you're searching for will not be found using outside sources. Find a quiet place where you can think things out for yourself.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're in dire need of an attitude adjustment, try to find a new endeavor in which to immerse yourself. The more interesting the project, the more successful you'll be.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Friends or colleagues might be intimidated by challenges, but you won't be. There are all kinds of indications that you would welcome a development that could test your mettle.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Financial matters can be dealt with quite effectively if you keep your cool. Trade on what turned out well in the past, because what worked before should work well again.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Sometimes we're better at managing the affairs of others than we are our own, which could be the case for you presently. However, helping others out could prove a boon for you, as well.

destinations

Where to go this fall

Fall is the time for savvy travels, with slashed prices, fewer crowds and cooler temps Whether it's far-flung (Hawaii) or close (Miami), here are the spots for you

Verona is a perfect European destination during the fall.

Colorado

Why go now: Rustic dude ranches, Rocky Mountain switchbacks and pioneer tradition make for a relaxing getaway before the snow descends on the state. Pick from a barrage of fall festivals in the charming mountain towns of Telluride and Aspen, whose film festival is an appealing, lower-key option to the madness at Park City's version. For those with nothing but downtime on their to-do lists, gazing at the blazing fall foliage makes for an itinerary all on its own.

Curacao

Why go now: It takes a bit longer to reach this far-flung Caribbean island, but its location well below the hurricane belt means travelers can enjoy its Dutch-flavored delights without worrying about any major weather woes. The island's charming capital city of Willemstad, which is separated into two distinct regions by a floating bridge, is well worth exploring — with several noteworthy museums, a floating fish market and shops featuring local artisans.

Catch waves for less in Hawaii during the fall.

Hawaii

Why go now: White-sand beaches and pounding surf, lush green landscapes and vibrant local culture with significantly less crowds — Hawaii becomes even more of a paradise in the fall. Room rates and airfare are often slashed from September through December, and the island beckons with its best weather of the year during this time, too — warm and sunny during the day, slightly cooler at night. Plus, travelers can get an authentic taste of Hawaiian heritage and culture with the Aloha Festivals: a month-long series of concerts, parades and street parties that runs from September through October.

Italy

Why go now: A vacation to Italy is sublime any time of year, but fall is by far the best time to go to take advantage of smaller crowds and much better rates, not to mention cooler weather. Autumn marks the start of the opera and performing arts season across the country. Wine and harvest festivals abound, too; a notable one is the Alba International White Truffle Fair, a six-week lineup dedicated to the coveted little tubers (called tartufos in Italian) that draws hundreds of foodies and chefs from all over the world.

Miami

Why go now: In the fall, Miami's steamy summertime temperatures cool somewhat — but the city's glamorous see-and-be-seen scene stays white-hot through winter, when the elite of art and design circles flock for Art Basel Miami Beach (Dec. 6-9). Equally serious revelers on the gay scene never miss the grand dame of circuit parties, White Party Week (Nov. 19-26).

Celtics at Heat, 8 p.m. TNT

South Beach showdown

Celtics open 2012-13 season in same place 2011-12 ended Stacked bench will be put to use immediately

We're saying it for the sixth straight year now – the Boston Celtics are legitimate title contenders.

It's Year 6 of what many thought was a three-year window, but we still hold these lofty expectations.

In five seasons, the Celtics have won an NBA Finals series, gone to another, made a trip to the Eastern Conference Finals, and two others to the semifinals. Not too shabby.

But make no mistake: another Eastern Conference Finals loss just isn't going to cut it. Celtics GM Danny Ainge has magnificently assembled a team that could very well be the deepest in the league.

While Celtics coach Doc Rivers is certainly glad to have the depth, he cautions about getting too high about it.

"It's still a five-on-five game," Rivers said. "I was laughing, if we could play 10-on-10, we would beat everybody. But you can't do that, it's five at a time on the floor."

Fair point, but having capable bodies to step in due to injury or foul trouble is a huge plus. Last season, Boston's bench averaged an NBA-low 15.2 minutes per game and ranked second-to-last in scoring at 21.6 points, last in rebounds (11.5), and last in assists (3.6). To put that in perspective, Western Conference contenders Denver, San Antonio and Dallas averaged nearly double that in points in roughly five more minutes of playing time.

Now with the additions of Jason Terry, Courtney Lee, Leandro Barbosa, Jeff Green and Jared Sullinger, the C's are built for battle for 48 minutes a night.

Still, they know that the war will go through South Beach.

Not because of former Celtic Ray Allen, who spurned a return to Boston to join the team's rival Miami Heat . But because of the reigning NBA MVP, LeBron James, a player the Celtics feel they can manage to contain now with plenty of versatility in their lineup.

Paul Pierce, Kevin Garnett, Rajon Rondo and the remaining players from last year's team were one quarter away from a return to the Finals. They could taste it – but unfortunately tasted defeat.

This is the most complete team since the 1980s era Big Three, and the C's know they're in a position to win it all.

"We have a hell of a team, man," Green said. "I mean who doesn't want to be a part of something special like this?"

It starts tonight.

▶ Ray Allen and LeBron James will see the Celtics for the first time this season tonight.

Targeting Miami

The Celtics will have multiple shots at their Eastern Conference rival this season:

- Tonight The champs get their rings and Ray Allen gets the cold shoulder.
- Sunday, Jan. 27 Allen visits the Garden for the first time as a member of the enemy.
- Monday, March 18 Heat are back in Boston as the playoffs near.
- Friday, April 12 One final tune-up in South Beach. Expect both teams to be sitting starters by this point.
